A few seats left for this show

SEATS are still available for Stage 2 Downham's latest black comedy production.

Without giving too much away, "Natural Causes" is the story of Vincent (played by Gerry Purchase), who becomes a professional suicide merchant following the discovery of an odourlous, tasteless and all-natural poison.

When he is contacted by Walter Bryce (Eddie Bootle), he arrives at the Bryces's country house and mistakenly assumes that his product is intended for Walter's consumption. It becomes clear that Walter's wife, Celia (Stephanie Brewerton) is the client – or is she?

This is when the mystery begins. Why are all her suicide letters typed and unsigned?

A Samaritan agrees to make a house call on the family, but after talking to Vincent, even his faith in this "wonderful world" is shaken.

After several thwarted attempts to poison various characters (resulting in multiple poisonings of a rubber plant) will anyone actually manage to drink the poison?

Natural Causes has been written by Eric Chappell and directed by David King.

Tickets are priced £5 (this includes tea and biscuits) and the performance will be staged at Downham Village Hall until Saturday.
