

Challenging role well portrayed by Bob

THE demanding role of a spastic was convincingly portrayed by Bob Cleeve in Waddington Drama Group's latest offering, "Whose life is it anyway?"

Bob accepted the gauntlet and gave a near-flawless performance in this gripping thought-provoking and moving, yet often humorous play by Brian Clark.

He was confined to bed on stage throughout the play and required to cover every emotion by vocal intonation and facial expression alone.

The staging and set presented considerable difficulties in the confines of St Helen's Sunday School, but these were cleverly overcome by stage manager and designer Barrie Wood.

Under producer Greta Wilkinson's expertise, the Waddington group gave a performance that brought a lump to the throat and unshed tears.

In the cast were: Margaret Johnson, Carmel Donald, Roy Edmondson, Glenys Wood, Graham Mitchell, Lesley Knight, Barry Phillips, Brian Keating, Derek Green, Barbara Price, Roger Wadsworth, John Whitaker and Debbie Wooff.
